THE TRIUMPH'S WORK
IN SMASHING FORTS

Crew Tell of the Attacks on the Dardanelles—Ship Seventeen Times In Action.

From the NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 26.—A coincident of The Daily Mail, in a distant from the Dardanelles, gave a vivid account of the part played by the British building Triumph in the recent operations.

"When the ship took her stand, the brave men of her board stood up fierce, and the guns of her rear were loaded, and the bombs were aimed, as if to deal destruction.

"But they were not allowed to strike. The British ships were aware that they were not alone, and the guns of the enemy were aimed at them. The British ships were not allowed to strike.

"The Triumph's work in smashing forts has been a matter of pride to the crew. They have been the first to enter the forts and destroy the guns within.

"On the morning of the attack, the crew was assembled on the decks. The captain addressed them, and told them that the British ships had the task of smashing the forts.

"The Triumph entered the forts and destroyed the guns within.
The crew was cheered, and the victories were celebrated.

"The Triumph has been employed in the service of the British government. It has been employed in the service of the British government.

"The Triumph's work in the Dardanelles has been a matter of proud.
